1 Kos is the Norwegian concept of luxury as simplicity; it reflects the instant happiness you get when you feel safe, warm, and content together. 2 Creating fine lines between the interior built environment and the exterior mountainscape allows our clients to connect with the outdoors even in the coldest months. 3 A classic timber-framed home with simple, natural materials where multiple generations can come together as family. 4 The use of varying rooflines allows this two-story building to remain connected to the landscape without feeling overpowering on the shoreline.

ANDREW VOLANSKY, AIA

As Vermonters, we hold our independence dear, yet we never waver in our commitment to community. The landscape and the seasons have made us resilient. Here, necessity is met with innovative practicality. A PLACE where experienced hands create with time-honored traditions of artistry and craftsmanship.

We seek modern, sustainable solutions in our designs. By incorporating creative uses of traditional materials and advanced systems, we create functional, comfortable, light-filled PLACES. Our work speaks to each client's lifestyle, to exist in harmony with their natural surroundings. Our mission is to create this sense of PLACE for each of our clients.

Our studio is larger than the space we work in.... Our approach celebrates collaboration and creation. Our belief that the client has a lot to bring to the design table is fundamental to the success of the project. Architecture is a complex process that involves many skilled and well-informed people, but it also relies on intuition and a vision. As design leaders, we bring together a strong team of professionals to not only complete your project but ultimately exceed your expectations by bringing your vision to life.

Each home design project, like each client, is unique. Your needs, style, and taste are of the utmost importance. Your budget and building site are all interdependent and equally crucial to project success. We find our inspiration for architectural designs by understanding your needs and desires and making them a reality for you to enjoy for many years to come.
